Coale: Written for Her Children, 1903 My mother s father died at Paoli, Ind., Eleventh month 23d, 1855, aged eighty-five years; her mother died at Paoli, Sixth month 22nd, 1842, aged sixty years. They were married Eleventh month 3d, 1795, and became the parents of eleven children, the oldest of whom died in infancy. Of the others, seven married, and three reached an advanced age; Rachel, who married Robert Hoggatt, dying, widowed, when nearly ninety-four; Davies, aged about eighty, in 1892, and my mother who died First month 27th, 1884, being eighty-two years and eighteen days old, at Cambridge City, Ind. I have no recollection of ever seeing my father, but have understood that my oldest brother much resembled him in appearance after he was grown. Soon after my father s death, my mother, with her children, moved to her father s in Paoli, Ind., having, after being widowed, learned plain bonnet making, with a view of following the trade as a means of support for her family, being left with nothing but her children. She did not remain long in Paoli, however, but went to Salem, a small town twenty-two miles distant, at which place was a large meeting of Friends, consequently a demand for plain bonnets. My first distinct remembrance of anything is at this time, - grandfather going with us, and our first meal was eaten on the packing box for a table. My paternal grandparents, not wishing mother, in the first place, to come to the west, wrote to her to send my brother Benjamin back to them to be schooled, and after much persuasion on their...
