Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The American Journal of Surgery, 1905, Vol. 35 It is a matter of lively interest to humanity that the nose do its work well. This interest is so great that it is strange to find that attention to the pathology of the nose is to a great extent a matter of our own generation. In our older medical texts consideration of diseases of the nose covers not more than two or three pages. When many present day practitioners were undergraduate students perhaps one-half of a lecture was devoted to the same subject. But with the accumulation of special knowledge of the past decades growing out of the increase in clinical instruction, a special technique and a rapidly increasing literature has come into existence. With the development of knowledge concerning the nose and its work came a realization that its prominence exposed it to injuries which became the source of other difficulties often not traced to their true source. Breaks, dislocations, and bruises, often looked upon at the time as negligible and of little moment, are later found to have caused blockages of the air passages which have interfered with normal breathing and with the drainage of the sinuses, and have caused serious nervous difficulties. Among the chief causes of these difficulties are deflection of the nasal septum. The development of surgical technique has made possible the correction of many of these difficulties with the aid of the knife. It is the purpose of this study to put into a permanent form the result of many years of study of the causes and results of deviations of the nasal septum, together with a description of the...
