Excerpt: . . . of great import to the Crown of England to curb them, and in time to reduce them to their former Obedience; and no body will imagine it consistant with the Interffl of the Crown any more to trust Government, in the hands of a People so ready and so able, upon all Occasions, to Revolt and set up for themselves; and the stronger they are, the more need there will be to keep them under. Thirdly, And lastly, They will really endure and undergo all those Miseries and Calamities which they fancied to themselves under the late Government, and become the Scor n and By-word of all their Neighbours. What then remains, but that they should endeavour to settle themselves in such a posture, as may at least mitigate, if not wholly prevent the before-mentioned Inconveniences If their Charter be restored, it can neither justify their past Actions, nor maintain their former Laws or Constitution of Government; but render them liable to be questioned and Quo Warrantdd for their Malefesance, whensoever the Supreme Supreme Authority shall think it meet. There is nothing therefore that can be safe or easie for them, and of greater Service and Benefit, than that they put themselves in a fubmissive and humble posture, fit and ready to receive their Majesties Commands; and not value themselves too much upon their own, Merits, lest they become unworthy of their of the Laws, which they have indisputably violated, in POSTSCRIPT. Was principall...
