Angelica is turned nun; and I am turned friar: and yet well marry one another in spite of the pope. Get me a cowl and beads, that I may play my part--for shell meet me two hours hence in black and white, and a long veil to cover the project; and we wont see one anothers faces, till we have done something to be ashamed of--and then well blush once for ail. Enter Tattle and Angelica. Jer. Ill take care, and Vol. Whisper. Ang. Nay, Mr. Tattle, if you make love to me, you spoil my design; for I intend to make you my Hows this! Tattle making love to Angelica! Tat. But, Madam, to throw away your person, such a person! and such a fortune, on a madman I Ang. I never loved him till he was mad; but dont tell any body so. Tat. Tell, Madam 1 alas, you dont know me. --I have much ado to tell your ladyship how long I have been in love with you--but, encouraged by the impossibility of Valentines making any more addresses to you, I have ventured to declare the very inmost passion of my heart. Oh, Madam, look upon us both. There you see the ruins of a poor decayed creature!--Here, a complete lively figure, with youth and health, and all his five senses, in perfection, Madam; and to all this, the most passionate lover--Ang. O, fy for shame, hold...
