The mechanism by means of which the signal boxes are operated was not shown to the committee. THE PORTER AUTOMATIC ELECTRIC SIGNAL AS A FIRE ALARM SYSTEM. The principle of the circuit is known as the earth or ground connections; that portion, however, which is outside of the office is metallic, the grounded ends being under control of the operator at the station. At each end of the circuit there is a system of relays and local signal. On one of the ends there is a rheostat for the purpose of increasing or diminishing the resistance of the circuit. The ordinary method for using this is to put in as much resistance on the rheostat end of the circuit as will enable the tension spring of the relay at the outgoing end of the circuit to overcome the magnetic attraction on the armature, thus holding it away from the poles until the resistance in the circuit is reduced when the magnetic attraction will overcome the tension spring and a local alarm is the result. The relay on the rheostat end of the circuit is operated just the reverse of the one at the battery end, the adjustment being made so that the magnetic attraction barely overcomes the tension spring; so that the slightest falling off of magnetic attraction will permit the tension spring to draw the armature back, when the other load alarm system will be operated. Each signal box has an earth...
