Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from A Little Excitement: A Play for Girls in Three Acts The costumes for the play should involve little or no expense. If it is not possible to borrow a policeman's uniform for Mike, he can wear dark trousers, a dark blue coat with collar turned up and ornamented with gold buttons. A helmet can be easily imitated out of card-board covered with cloth. He should wear white cotton gloves and carry a policeman's club. A reddish wig is advisable. This part can with perfect propriety be taken by a girl. Nora. Act I. A red wig. Light colored blouse turned in at neck. Very full skirt of gay plaid gingham or striped calico, short enough to show white cotton stockings and large clumsy boots with half of the buttons missing. Short jacket of antique design and absurdly trimmed sailor hat. Carpet bag and umbrella. Later, when Nora is attired as Angie, she puts on Dolly's coat turned inside out and Maudie's hat hind-side-before. Face is shrouded in pink automobile veil and white gloves thrust...
